

Zimmermann Shocks in London

“Shocking”, is how Londoners find it, reports Peter Zimmermann with amusement. The gallery owner from Mannheim, in cooperation with the gallery “Fred London Ltd.”, is currently showing a solo exhibition of the American Simon Raab in the British capital. The works being shown come from the series “embedded frames”, in which Raab works a sheet of metal over a linden wood frame and then folds the sheet metal using heavy equipment. “Royal Skullduggery” – a less than flattering view of the British Queen – is causing a particular sensation. The English author Robin Page purchased the work straight away on the evening of the opening. Zimmermann is also showing works by Raab in his gallery on Leibnitzstrasse 20 until August 14th. pwr
